THE

Kings of England and their Descendants.

By JOSEPH FOSTER.

BEING

GENEALOGICAL NARRATIVES OF

OUR NOBILITY AND GENTRY:

Illustrated with Chart Pedigrees,

SHOWING THEIR ROYAL LINEAGE.

SPECIALLY BOUND for the Drawing-Room table.

IT is not a little remarkable that the Pedigrees of our Nobility and Gentry who inherit the BLOOD ROYAL deriving from Kings Henry III., Edward I., Edward III., and Henry VII., etc., should have remained, for the most part, unpublished, including, as they do, nearly all the chief historical personages of the Middle Ages, the majority of whom are now only represented through females.

This—by far the most interesting—branch of genealogical lore is, according to many, even of greater literary importance than our extant Peerage and Baronetage: for it not only embraces the families of the highest in the land, but also includes the histories of our extinct nobility and gentry, together with many pedigrees of the aristocracy, once ranked among the landed gentry, but now, owing to the vicissitudes of families, classed among the great unacred; it therefore affords ample scope for the genealogist and historian.

Every pedigree admitted into this collection must be worked up to the Editor's standard of completeness, and each family should arrange for the expense of printing. This work will be similar to the Peerage and Baronetage, with the addition of chart pedigrees (see next page); and will contain a very great number of hitherto unpublished Descents, many of them derived from the Editor's private collection, and relating to persons who are probably unaware of possessing the distinction. The descendants of these historical families will thus have the advantage of possessing, in a handy and elegant volume, a genealogical account of their illustrious ancestors, as well as of their immediate relatives. The fictitious and erroneous Descents printed elsewhere will be omitted.

"While speaking of Mr. Foster's magnificent volume (the Peerage and Baronetage), we would take the opportunity of calling special attention to an announcement of another work on which he is now engaged, and which, when completed, will be one, not only of National or European, but of universal importance. It is entitled, 'The Kings of England and their Descendants; being Genealogical Narratives of the Royal Descents of our Nobility and Gentry,' and has for its aim the giving in proper form the pedigrees of our nobility and gentry, in whose veins, no matter how far removed, the blood Royal has coursed, and is still coursing, 'in all their ramifications as regards present representatives.' The labour will be enormous, but the results, in such hands as Mr. Foster's, cannot but be eminently satisfactory, and we shall long to see the first of his volumes."—The Reliquary, July, 1880.

Mr. Foster is collecting Royal Descents for publication, and he will therefore be very glad to receive pedigrees for this object; or, as his collection on this subject is already very extensive, he will, if required, investigate the pedigrees of those who have reason for supposing that they derive from the blood Royal, and may wish to have the descent worked out and printed in this collection. Particulars on application to Mr. Foster, 21, Boundary Road, London, N.W.

Now Ready, Volume I., 768 pages, large 8vo, handsomely bound, price 2 guineas. Annual Subscription for 12 Parts of 64 pages, post free, £1 11s. 6d., if prepaid.

COLLECTANEA GENEALOGICA.

PROSPECTUS AND SPECIMEN PAGES.

HAVING pledged myself to raise my "Peerage and Baronetage" to a standard of excellence never as yet attained by any similar works, and having also commenced the compilation of a series of Royal Descents, it will be a surprise to some of my patrons that I have now undertaken, in addition, to edit a Monthly Publication, although it is generally allowed that the proposed contents are destined to prove of the greatest importance to the Genealogist and the Historian, by placing at their disposal an invaluable array of facts, "all which would require Briarëus his hundred hands, Argus his hundred eyes, and Nestor his century of years, to marshal."

Shortly stated, the explanation is, that upon applying myself to perfect the Pedigrees in my Peerage, and more especially in my Royal Descents, as I consider they ought to be perfected (my standard of excellence always ascending), I found myself confronted with difficulties so great that I felt compelled to lower for awhile my flag, so that I might give the causes of those difficulties my careful deliberation—more especially as I am strongly of opinion that too many of the genealogical books issued in the present day are merely sprinkled with an infinitesimal quantity of original matter, while they abound with repetitions of well-known blunders, and are embellished with many that are new.

For some reasons, I hold that further MS. Collections are to be deprecated, especially if they are not well arranged, and that attention should be rather bestowed on utilizing the vast unindexed, and consequently unknown, raw material which lies ready at hand, not only in existing MSS., but also in printed books. If such a plan could be extensively carried out, not only would an incalculable boon be conferred upon all Genealogists, but a more wide-spread interest in their science would also be aroused among those to whom the difficulties of its study have hitherto made it a sealed book. All Genealogical Serials, extant or extinct, have failed, in my opinion, to interest more than a narrow circle of readers, because they have been too diffuse in their aim and too kaleidoscopic in their contents. The Collectanea proper should be reduced almost to a minimum (none but subjects of general interest and permanent value being admitted), and the bulk of the Serial should be devoted to the publication of important matter, carefully and systematically arranged.

To supply in some measure the above want, which must have been generally felt by others also, and to lessen the difficulties which I, in common with all, have experienced in the compilation of the genealogical works to which I have already referred, I have determined to edit, and issue to Subscribers, a Monthly Serial, devoted principally to the republication, in an original and handy form, of Collections of Genealogical matter, each alphabetically arranged, and each independently paged. The importance of good Indexes has been of late much insisted on, but even the best Index involves a reference to, and implies the possession of, the original work; whereas, it will be a special feature of my own plan, that, by substituting Lists for Indexes, the required fact will be found at a glance, without the need of a second reference. A Series of Lists will thus be eventually formed, which must serve to lighten incalculably the arduous labours of the Genealogist.

I have been fortunate in having such material at hand as the "Obituary" of Sir William Musgrave, Bart., the Funeral Certificates of Ireland, and (by permission of Mr. Sims) the Index to the Herald's Visitations, which last will be re-arranged, with additions, in continuous Alphabetical Order. But, in each and all of these, much careful revision is still absolutely necessary in preparing them for the press.

The Marriages of the Nobility and Gentry claim special notice. Their compilation is due, in the first instance, to the rare energy and perseverance of Miss Ada Gardner, a great-niece of Dalloway, the historian of Sussex. Those from the Registers of Westminster Abbey are included by permission of Col. Chester, and those from the Times (1865 to 1880) are extracted by special permission from the private collection of Sir Albert Woods, Garter King-of-Arms. This collection has a pagination of its own.

To test the value of the plan I am pursuing, let any well-known Pedigree be taken, and let it be seen what additions can be made to it merely from the Lists of Marriages, of Deaths, and of Members of Parliament (as they appear in this Part only), and I apprehend that all will admit that, with a few Collections such as these, it would not be a difficult matter to transform almost any Pedigree (other than that of an old ennobled family) from a meagre string of nominal generations into a family history, abounding and sparkling with facts, without which it possesses few, if any, points of interest.

It only remains for me now to press upon my Genealogical friends the fact that I hope they will honour me with their support by sending me their names as Subscribers, and by forwarding me their Annual Subscription for this Publication. As all Genealogists of any status admit that it must be indispensable to them, so I trust that their interest in the Work will induce them to show practically their approval by influencing their friends to become Subscribers also, and by doing all in their power to ensure its success.

I feel sure that, sooner or later, there will not be a library of any importance, public or private, which will not possess this Series of Works of Reference.

Admissions to the Inns of Court.

PROSPECTUS.

IT is with considerable pleasure that I am enabled to inform the subscribers to my Collectanea that special permission has been granted me by the authorities to edit, and to publish in this work, the Admissions of members to Lincoln's Inn, to the Middle Temple, and to Gray's Inn.

As these records are practically virgin soil, and as I am now placing the information they contain at the disposal of the public for the first time, I may with propriety explain their peculiar value both to the biographer and the genealogist.

These entries (which commence about the middle of the 16th century) refer to the gentry and their younger sons; and as it is customary to record the parentage of each student on his admission, it is obvious that no other series of documents outside the College of Arms—saving the similar Lists of Admissions to the Universities—can afford so much authentic information relating to our Aristocracy, or throw so much additional light on their genealogical history. The earlier admissions supply the data for identification which are generally wanting in the early Parish Registers, while the subsequent, and even recent, entries form a supplement to the Herald's Visitations, which in many cases they enable us to continue over an often obscure period. They certainly equal these Visitations in interest, even if they do not excel them, inasmuch as each respective register supplies a fund of original information relating to families in every part of England and Ireland.

It is a marked result of our national system of primogeniture that the cadet branches of our landed families are often hopelessly obscured, while the parent stem can be clearly traced through its connection with the ancestral estate. But it frequently happens that these same branches emerge again into eminence, and possibly surpass the ancestral distinctions of their house. Now, it is precisely in these cases—where an awkward gap has to be bridged over—that these Admissions may provide the missing link, and enable us to establish a connected pedigree.

To increase the general interest, notes of identification will be added where possible, but the special feature of the Admissions will rather be found in those names which are not to be met with elsewhere, and among which many must discover those of their missing or perhaps obscure ancestors.

In short, these Admissions belong to that class of records the importance of which is now so strongly insisted on both by the historian and the genealogist. And while they possess for the latter a special value, as dealing exclusively with the aristocratic classes, they will be appreciated by the former as the national authentic register of the greatest of our learned professions.

AN ALPHABETICAL HAND-LIST

TO PRINTED

WILLS, ADMINISTRATIONS, ETC.

I am anxious to inaugurate without delay the principle of systematic literary co-operation with my genealogical confrères, especially in the provinces, as laid down in my introduction to the Collectanea.

I have, therefore, elected to commence with Wills, in preference to monumental inscriptions, or isolated extracts from parish registers, not so much because in their case the difficulties of co-operation are minimized, but rather because the subject is the most important of those named, and especially as it is hoped that this list will enable students to consult a will that may be in print on their shelves, instead of making application to one of the many Probate Courts, or at least to obtain the date of a will, and thus obviate the tedium of a search through the crabbed caligraphy of the original calendars; these are manifest advantages.

In placing an instalment of this list in the hands of my friends, I desire that it should be regarded as tentative. And as the interests of all genealogists are practically identical in requiring the best of working tools, so I trust that I may as soon as possible find representative men in each county, who, actuated by this spirit, will superintend the editing of good indices of wills, etc., from their respective county histories and local works: by this means only can this list be successfully and speedily completed; for if it were left to a single individual, it would in all probability absorb a lifetime.

In preparing this instalment, I have been greatly assisted by the co-operation of my friends, Miss Ada C. Gardner, whose services in compiling the list of marriages are now well known; and also Miss Sharpe.

I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without reverting to my favourite theme to reprint at least the early calendars in H.M. Probate Office, Somerset House.

I maintain that it is impossible to over-estimate the boon which would be conferred upon the historian and the public by the adoption of the Abecedarian arrangement, and it is equally impossible to over-estimate the loss, not only to history but also the loss of time to every individual who has occasion to consult these ill-arranged calendars.

To the biographer especially, the loss is simply beyond conception, and tantalizing beyond description, because he knows that to search for the will of every individual in whose history he is interested, would in itself doom him to the drudgery of a life, and it is not too much to say that this would be a waste of valuable time; while in the case of the general public, an average delay of a quarter of an hour in searching for the name of a single testator by each person during the day, brings up "the delays of office" to an enormous total of what is undoubtedly a sheer waste of public time, which under the present state of things is likely to go on for ever.

If the authorities have full confidence in the accuracy and completeness of their calendars, I would suggest that all the names should be taken out which are under the first letter, and arranged before the second is commenced, and so on with each subsequent letter until the alphabet is completed; by this means the public would very soon begin to realize the benefits of the proposed alterations. The year 1799 might conclude the first series, and the year 1800 commence the second.

If when this is done the expense of printing is found to be too great, these new MS. Calendars would in themselves have the merit of obviating much of the existing difficulty. A reference to them might very properly be made to carry a double search fee, and a special fee for general searches might be introduced, as in the office of the Registrar-General.

It is devoutly to be wished that this simple though all-important reform may very soon have the careful consideration of the Treasury.

"If continued on the lines laid down in the first number, Mr. Foster's 'Collectanea' cannot fail to a welcome addition to the genealogical student's list of working tools."—Notes and Queries.

"The great value of the publication consists in the serial works completed in this part, to each of which teen pages are devoted, and which are to be continued in future numbers, each with its separate gination, so that when any one is completed it can be withdrawn from the others and bound up in a ume by itself. . . . If Mr. Foster's enterprise is properly supported, the students of history and biography l find on their shelves a series of volumes of reference which will save them a vast amount of time and labour, l will also find, to a great extent, their work done to their hands. It would be impossible for any genuine dent to see the volume just issued without recognizing the enormous benefit which Mr. Foster proposes to stow upon literary men, but which it is evident he cannot accomplish without the generous support of those erested in such matters."—Academy.

"If Mr. Joseph Foster's annotated list of the English Members of Parliament should continue as it has gun, it will prove a great work nobly planned and nobly executed."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Mr. Joseph Foster has commenced an enormous work, which must involve an incalculable amount painstaking research, and which bids fair to be distinguished by that scrupulous exactness and that rejection all doubtful detail which have characterised his previous publications. The new work is to be published subscription in monthly parts, it deals with different subjects, each separately paged, so that on the ap etion of the huge work each subject may be bound alone, and form a complete volume in itself. It will seen from his programme that the completed work will be an enormous mass of tabulated information on tters genealogical and personal such as the world has not yet seen."—Manchester Examiner and Times.

PREFACE.

AN historical list of Members of Parliament, alphabetically arranged and systematically annotated, will at once be admitted by all biographers to supply a want that has long been felt, and to deserve a place of the highest rank among the working tools of the historian, the genealogical student, and the journalist. But, dealing as it does with a subject of such widespread and commanding interest, I may naturally expect that it will be widely appreciated beyond the sphere of professional writers, and that it will be valued by the members of every family whose name is to be found in its pages, as being practically the only available record of the parliamentary service of their ancestry and their kindred. Of this work, which I have undertaken to produce, with the assistance of eminent literary friends, the present volume is the first instalment.

It is to be regretted that the errors which so glaringly disfigure the official return of the Irish members, as has been shown (in my Collectanea) by Mr. Beaven, have compelled me to postpone for the present that section—in the hope that Government may feel bound to issue a somewhat more correct edition—for the Scottish members are in some respects so unsatisfactory to deal with as to form the least favourable commencement of the series. Scanty, indeed, is the information to be gleaned from the printed works that exist on Scottish genealogy and topography, and its gist has too often to be tediously sought, buried like a kernel in the imposing mass of a crabbed and wordy document. True, there is Wood's Peerage by Douglas; but I fear I am unaware of any similar work dealing exclusively with Scottish genealogy which is worthy to be classed in the same rank. This is the more remarkable when we remember the advantage enjoyed by genealogists beyond the border in having easy access to the varied and voluminous records of the General Register at Edinburgh. I must, however, always except the Record publications now in progress, e.g. the Great Seal Register, the Privy Council Register, the Exchequer Rolls, etc.; but as these principally refer to the fifteenth century, they can only throw light on a small portion of the period embraced in this work. Those great Club Societies, the Roxburgh, the Bannatyne, and the Maitland, who might have edited and printed so much valuable material, have practically missed their mark by catering for the powerful few instead of the majority of the nation. How much more might have been achieved by the publication, on some definite plan, of Wills, Charters, Registers, etc., and, better even than Parish Registers, now-a-days so much the fashion, would be the more important and exclusive yet comprehensive National Registers of the Students of the Learned Professions; and perhaps the various Guild Registers of the kingdom would prove of even greater value. Such work, when once done, would indeed be to genealogists "a joy for ever."

It is partly on this account that I have to acknowledge a greater preponderance of un-identified names in this portion of the work than will occur in those embracing the English and Irish members. But this is also a natural result of the Scottish surnames being comparatively so few. A mere enumeration of the numbers bearing the same surnames would give but a faint idea of the confusion and perplexity involved, as most of them sat in several Parliaments, and often for different districts. Thus, there are not only more than eighty Campbells and more than ninety Stewarts, but there are three or four times as many separate entries of these names, all requiring to be assorted! As if to increase the difficulties inseparable from such a task as this, identification is rendered additionally troublesome, not only by the different territorial or local designations assigned to the same person, but also by the varying combinations (and therefore designations) of the burgh districts. As this peculiarity has evidently proved a source of confusion to former writers, I have printed these districts in detail on p. xvi.

But while entitled to claim, on these weighty grounds, a lenient judgment on the performance of my task, it is gratifying to add that, with the help of my coadjutors, my efforts have in the main been crowned with success. I have already stated that our subject has a widespread and commanding interest, and that, not only because parliamentary service has been the stepping-stone to power and honour for so many of our noble houses, but also because a seat in the House of Commons is the legitimate aspiration of all classes of men, and specially of those whose energy and ability have raised them in the social scale. These will here find their names recorded side by side with those of our historic governing families, enrolled alike in the great Walhalla of the Parliaments of the British Empire.

Nor will the general public fail to discover in these pages names which appeal to all lovers of their country. Here will be found the hero of Corunna, and Abercromby the hero of Aboukir Bay. Here, too, is the gallant Graham, driven by grief to a martial career which led to victory and a peerage, and Simon Fraser, the loyal chieftain, who fought and bled for England to atone for the treason of his house. Here, among authors, are Hume and Macaulay; among Premiers, are Melbourne (Lamb) and Gladstone. Here is the sorely tried Melville, a scion of Dundas of Arniston; and here is Monmouth's evil genius, the fanatical Fletcher of Saltoun.

There are two features which in a marked degree have characterized political life north of the Tweed. The first is the persistence of certain families, where in England there is a continuous rise and fall. The second is the tradition of hereditary feuds, the struggles of rival clans and families, which, even though unconsciously, are perpetuated to this day at the poll. Of the former there will be found some striking instances in the chart pedigrees I have inserted in the text. Thus, the houses of Elliot (Earl of Minto), Grant (Earl of Seafield), Hope, and Anstruther, can actually boast an unbroken descent of seven generations in Parliament, Campbell of Calder (Lord Cawdor), Dundas of Arniston (Lord Melville), and Erskine (Earl of Rosslyn), show six generations, while Dundas (Earl of Zetland), and Foulis, each exhibit five. And as the governing families continued, so also did their politics and their feuds. The Cavaliers who voted in "the drunken parliament" were the sons of the men who had ridden with Montrose, the fathers of the men who rode with Dundee, and whose sons and grandsons, in turn, were ruined in the cause of the Pretender. The Campbells who voted for their chieftain's son at the election of 1878 (p. 50) were the descendants of the men who, centuries before, had followed to the field the "Bourbons of the Highlands" at the fiery cross of the McAllum More.

Scotland has ever had her Montagues and her Capulets. To select from our pages one instance out of many, the representation of Roxburghshire was shared, in the days before the Civil Wars, by the houses of Elliot and of Douglas. In the following century a Douglas sat from 1700 till he was ousted by an Elliot in 1708, who in his turn gave way to a Douglas in 1715. In our own day a Douglas was returned in 1874, but was ousted by an Elliot in 1880 (p. 122). Thus has the unending contest been carried on from generation to generation.

The names of members and other parliamentary information derived from the return are kept totally distinct from the annotations, and appear in a larger and different kind of type.

It is hoped, as this part will be found reliable, that it will prove of considerable value to the historian; I have also incorporated the members of the Cromwellian parliaments as given in Willis's Notitia Parliamentaria. The chart pedigrees, eighty in number, will be of considerable interest to their representatives, and of valuable assistance to the historian, for they exhibit at a glance the parliamentary representation of the great governing families. It may be as well to repeat that in 1590 the minor barons or lairds reappear in Parliament, and continue to be variously styled small barons, commissioners for the small barons, and commissioners for shires, and also that this latter designation was continued until the Union, prior to which event the representatives of the burghs were styled commissioners for the burghs. These various designations, which are cumbersome and of no very great consequence to the general reader, have not been retained—doubtless the pedant will charge me with perpetrating an anachronism—the parliamentary return has, however, been adhered to in the case of the minor barons, and all persons appear here as M.P.'s, in the same sense in which they appear in the return.

The annotations, which are principally taken from my own Peerage and Baronetage, are chiefly intended to serve as a means of ready identification for the general reader. I am indebted for some valuable information—always most cordially given me—to Thomas Dickson, esq., Curator of the Historical Department, General Register-house, Edinburgh, the responsible compiler of the Scottish parliamentary return, and I am equally grateful to J. T. Clark, esq., of Edinburgh, Advocate's librarian, for the trouble he has taken in supplying me with dates of admissions of advocates and other particulars from his own collections, which have often been of the greatest importance in assisting to identify some of the less prominent individuals.

In marked contrast to the cordial co-operation of these gentlemen is the churlish reception of my work by the Lyon Clerk Depute, whose time and labour have been freely expended, not in assisting me with the information which his post places within his reach, but in hunting for the blemishes incidental to such a work, and in making the most of them when discovered; they have been corrected in this edition. It is inevitable that I should occasionally be led into error by following the recognised Scottish Authorities, as the verification of every extract would more than exhaust the energies of a lifetime. I have studiously continued the exposure of the sham Scottish baronetcies, and this it would seem is a cause of offence, though it might have been removed long ago, had the details necessary to substantiate each discredited descent been publicly forthcoming. No one who knows anything of the nature of Scottish genealogical services, and the often consequent confirmation of arms or grant of supporters, will accept such quaint proceedings as even negative proof, unless the evidences on which these acts are founded can be and are supplied. I shall probably soon have occasion to return to this subject elsewhere.

I have been enabled in almost every instance to detect and correct the few important errors which exist in the parliamentary return on which this work is founded—at any rate those which occur since the Union—a list of them will be found at page xvii. For this singular advantage I am indebted to the Rev. A. B. Beaven, M.A., who, together with Thomas J. Hercy, esq., of Cruchfield, and Mr. W. D. Pink of Leigh, has also revised the whole of the proof-sheets. I am under the greatest obligation to these gentlemen for their valuable additions and important corrections, without which I should have lacked much of the confidence I now possess in this compilation.

It may cause surprise that this particular volume has been compiled by Englishmen, and not, as would seem more natural, by Scotchmen, who might be supposed to be more conversant with the history of their parliamentary representatives. Indeed, it has practically been suggested that this section of the work should have been omitted sooner than that it should have been attempted by myself. If this principle were logically applied, no Peerage compiled by an Englishman would be allowed to contain the Scottish honours, even though as in the present case no Scotsman were found to record them! My object in this compilation has been also to render my Peerage more complete in this particular. I deem myself, however, most fortunate in securing the co-operation of the gentlemen I have named, and I much doubt, from the scarcity of such literature to which I have already alluded, whether an editorial quartett could be found on the other side of the Tweed, not only able, but also willing to assist con amore in the production of a work of so unremunerative though valuable a character as this, which, even if it repay the cost of printing, can never in all probability repay the cost of labour, and may therefore claim, with justice, to be a present to the Scottish people.

"The compilation of an Index," it has been truly observed, "is one of those useful labours for which the public, commonly better pleased with entertainment than with real service, are rarely so forward to express their gratitude as we think they ought to be. It has been considered as a task fit only for the plodding and the dull; but with more truth it may be said that this is the judgment of the idle and the shallow." It is easy to sneer at a work compiled by "scissors and paste;" but it has avowedly from the first been my object in Collectanea—from which this work is reprinted, with additions and corrections—not to add to the mass of "unindexed raw material," but to render that which already exists available for my fellow genealogists. Nor is it the least object that will be gained by the publication of this annotated list, that any student interested in the subject will be henceforth spared the tedious drudgery of the necessary preliminary research, and can at his leisure, by reference to Wills and Charters, elucidate further still this branch of the history of his nation.

PARLIAMENTS AND CONVENTIONS OF THE ESTATES OF SCOTLAND.

REPRINTED FROM THE PARLIAMENTARY RETURN.

IN the Parliament of Scotland the Estates sat and voted together as one Chamber. There was no division into an Upper and Lower House. The following Return, therefore, contains only the names and dates of election, so far as they can be ascertained, of the elected or representative Members of the Parliaments of Scotland, with the names of the shires or burghs for which they were respectively returned.

The beginnings of Parliamentary representation in Scotland are associated with the rise of the burgesses into political importance, as the Third Estate of the realm, in the early part of the fourteenth century. Their presence in the Great Council of the nation is first clearly ascertained on the occasion of the Parliament held at Cambuskenneth, 15th July 1326, when the earls, barons, burgesses, and freeholders, in full Parliament assembled, granted to King Robert Bruce, in consideration of his great services, and for the due support of the Royal dignity, the tenth penny of all rents and profits of lands, estimated according to the old extent or valuation of King Alexander III.; the King conceding in return the important constitutional limitation that no tax or impost should be levied by the Crown without the consent of the Parliament. It has generally been supposed that thenceforward the burgesses appeared by their Commissioners in every Parliament; but this does not admit of being satisfactorily determined, inasmuch as no sederunts or rolls of Members have been preserved of the many Parliaments which assembled between that date and the middle of the following century.

Only a very few lists of Commissioners for Burghs are extant of earlier date than the beginning of the sixteenth century. Before that time the records contain the names of those only who, at the beginning of each Session, were elected Members of the committees on which great part of the business of the Parliament was devolved—the Committee of Articles [Domini ad articulos inquirendos], by which all measures were discussed and prepared for receiving legislative sanction; and the Judicial Committee for hearing of causes and appeals Domini auditores ad causas et querelas audiendas et ad judicia contradicta], which, co-ordinately with the Lords of Council, discharged the functions of a supreme civil tribunal till the institution, in 1532, of a permanent high court of judicature, under the name of the Court of Session.

By the small barons and freeholders, who were regarded as of the same estate with the greater barons, the feudal obligation to give suit and presence in the King's High Court of Parliament was always felt to be a burden; and as early as the time of James I., in 1427, an Act was passed for their relief, granting them authority to elect representatives. This statute, however, remained inoperative. In 1457 and 1503 Acts were passed for relief of the more inconsiderable of the freeholders, granting exemption, except when specially summoned, to those of them whose holdings were below a specified value. In 1567 there was renewed legislation on the subject of the election of Commissioners, but it was not till 1587 that the representation of the shires was actually established. It was then ordained "that the Commissioners of all the Sheriffdoms be elected at the first head court after Michaelmas yearly;" that they be "authorised with sufficient commissions, sealed and subscribed by six at least of the barons and freeholders" of the shire; and that "the compearance of the said Commissioners of the shires in Parliaments, or General Councils, shall relieve the whole remanent small barons and freeholders of the shires of the suit and presence due in the said Parliaments." From that time onwards the Commissioners for the shires are found in the roll of every Parliament.

Besides the Parliaments, Conventions of the Estates were frequently called together for the despatch of urgent business. At first they consisted of the Privy Council, with a few additional Members specially summoned, and their sittings rarely exceeded one or two days. In 1567 it was enacted that Provosts of Burghs, or Commissioners for Burghs, should be present in every Convention, and especially when taxation was to be imposed. This was, for a time, very imperfectly observed; but, gradually, the representation of the burghs became more regular, and the representation of the shires being established towards the close of the sixteenth century, the composition of the Convention of Estates became at length substantially identical with that of the Parliament. The Convention which met 14th March 1689 was turned into a Parliament, without re-election of Members. The Conventions have therefore been included in this Return.

Sir Robert Anstruther, of Balcaskie, 5th Bart., descended from the original patentee—M.P. Fifeshire 1864-80.

John —— Anstruther Easter 1597 conv.; 1600.

Probably the John Anstruther served heir of his father Andrew (who fell at the battle of Pinkie 1547), and of his grandfather John Anstruther of that ilk, and is said to have died [at a great age in 1610. Great-grandfather of Sir Philip, named below.

Anstruther—continued.

John (sir) of Anstruther —— Anstruther Easter 1702-7; Anstruther Easter (now St. Andrews) burghs 1708-10 (styled Sir John Anstruther, younger of that ilk); 1710 until unseated in 1711, 1713-15 (then styled a Baronet); Fifeshire 1715-22 (an officer of the Crown 1717, styled John Anstruther of Anstruther); 1227-7 (also styled Anstruther of Anstruther); 1727-34 (styled a Baronet); [1734-41 (styled a Knight).

Son of Sir William Anstruther, see below; master of the works in Scotland 1717; died 6 Oct. 1753 (G.M.), or 30 Sept. 1753 (L.M.), having married, Jan. 1717, Lady Margaret Carmichael, eldest dau. of James, 2nd Earl of Hyndford, she d. 1721, leaving an only [surviving son Sir John, next mentioned.

John (Sir) of Anstruther, Bart. —— Anstruther Easter (now St. Andrews) burghs 1766-8, 1768-74, 1780 (until he accepted Chiltern hundreds shortly before 1 Jan. 1783), 1790 to 1793, when he again accepted the Chiltern hundreds.

Son of the preceding Sir John Anstruther, and father of Sir John Anstruther, Bart., next [mentioned, he died 4 July 1799. See Foster's Baronetage.

John (sir) of Lincoln's Inn, London, counsellor at law —— Anstruther Easter (now St. Andrews) burghs 1783-4, 1784-90, 1796-7; (Chief Justice Supreme Court of Judicature, Calcutta, 1797); 1806-7 (then late C. J., Bengal); 1807 [until his death (26 Jan. 1811).

Second son of the preceding Sir John Anstruther, by his wife Janet, dau. of James Fall of Dunbar, merchant. Barrister-at-Law, L.I., 1779, P.C. (19 Nov. 1806), took a leading part in the impeachment of Warren Hastings. M.P. Cockermouth, 1790-6 (see M.P. England), a Justice for co. Merioneth, etc., 1793-7, knighted 4 October 1797, cr. a Baronet of Great Britain 18 May 1798, general receiver of Bishop's rents, Scotland, Chief Justice Bengal 1797 to 1806, born at Elie House, Fifeshire, 27 March 1753, died in Albemarle St., [London, 26 June 1811.

John (sir) of Anstruther (2nd) Bart. —— Anstruther Easter (now St. Andrews) [burghs 1811, 1812, until his death (28 Jan. 1818.

Elder son of the preceding Sir John Anstruther, Bart., assumed the additional surname and arms of Carmichael on succeeding as heir of entail to the last Earl of Hyndford, 1817; d. 2 Jan. 1818 and m. 11 Jan. 1817 Jessie, dau. Ox., who died 27 Dec., 1880, aged 94,) and left a posthumous son Sir John, b. 6 Feb. 1818, [and d. Nov. 1831.

Anstruther—continued.

Philip (sir) of that ilk, Knt., Bart. —— Fifeshire 1665 conv.; 1667 conv.; [1678 conv.; (then styled Baronet).

Younger son of Sir Robert Anstruther (gentleman of the bedchamber to James I., P.C., Charles I., Ambassador to Germany; buried in Westminster Abbey, 9 Feb. 1644-5; knighted 1650; like his father and uncle Sir William, he was a zealous royalist, he had a command in the Royal army when invading England, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester, his estates were sequestered by Oliver Cromwell, and so continued untill the Restoration (it may be that the representative in the convention of 1678 was Sir Philip his 4th son & namesake); he d. 1702, having m. Christian, dau. of Gen. Sir James Lumsden, of Innergelly, co. Fife. and had 5 sons, Sir William (see below), Sir James, of Airdrie, Sir Robert of Bal- [caskie, Bart., Sir Philip of Anstrutherfield, and Sir Alexander, Bart.

That Sir Philip Anstruther was a baronet is by no means certain; the baronetages state that he was knighted in 1650, and that two of his sons, Sir William and Sir Robert, were created Baronets of Nova Scotia in 1694. There is however no evidence at present of a baronetcy having been conferred upon the eldest son; see Sir William Anstruther below, and Sir John (eldest son of Sir William) Anstruther above (see also "Foster's Baronetage").

Philip (lieut.-genl.) —— Anstruther Easter (now St. Andrews) burghs 1715-22, (lieut.-col. of the foot guards 1715) 1722-7 (then of Airdrie), 1727-34, 1734-41 [(then col.), 1747-54 (then lieut.-genl.)

Alexander (sir), of Dalvey, bart. —— Inverness burghs 1761-8.

Married and died s.p. (son of Patrick Grant, of Inverladinem). This baronetcy (created 10 Aug. 1688) is discredited, and it is believed that this Patrick was the first to receive it (service 22 Aug. 1752) since the death of the grantee, Sir James Grant of Dalvey, 1695. Sir Alexander had a grant of supporters from the Lyon office 8 July 1761, and it is seriously argued that this was the most direct recognition the crown could afford; this is news indeed! the crown and Lyon king of arms were evidently synonymous when George the [third was king!!!

The Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage of the British Empire

BY JOSEPH FOSTER,

For 1882.

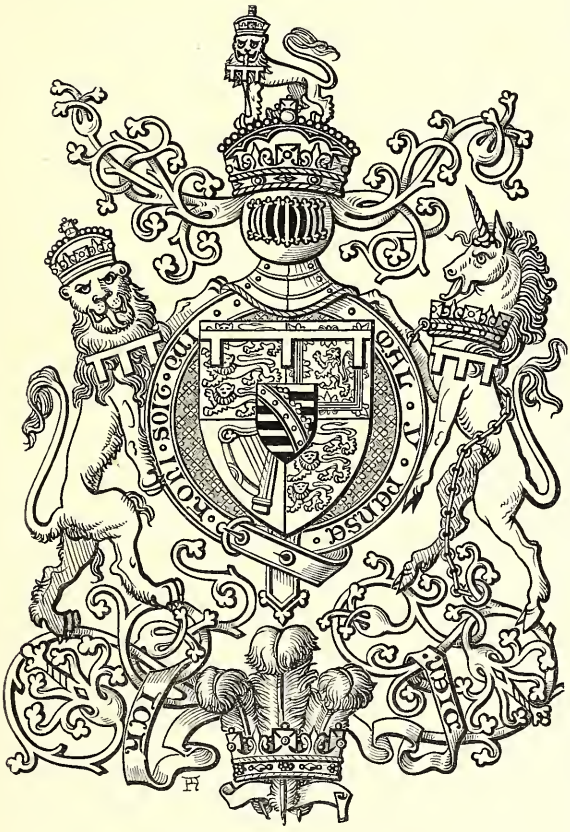
The NEW EDITION (being the THIRD) of this work is now ready.

THE PEERAGE, in one Volume, Price 21s.

THE BARONETAGE and KNIGHTAGE, in one Volume, Price 21s.

The entire work can be had in one Volume, Price 42*s*.

THE PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE of the BRITISH EMPIRE contains upwards of 1,400 woodcuts of Arms of Peers and Baronets, full-page Engravings of the Royal Arms and the Insignia of the various Orders of Knighthood, and numerous other illustrations, drawn by Fr. Anselm, of Mount Saint Bernard Abbey, and Mr. Forbes Nixon, of Barnard's Inn.



All the Coats of Arms have been revised and corrected by the records of the College of Arms and the Lyon Office. In the pedigrees the collateral branches are more fully given than in any other work.

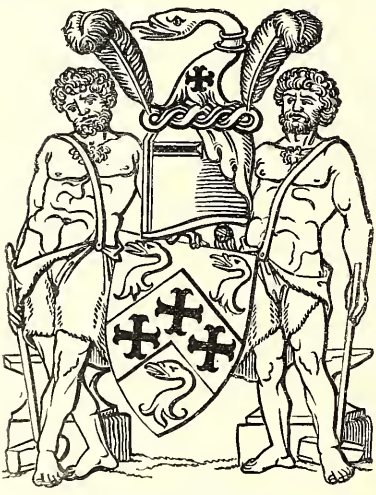
NICHOLS AND SONS, 25, PARLIAMENT STREET, WESTMINSTER.
CHAPMAN AND HALL, LIMITED, 11, HENRIETTA STREET, COVENT GARDEN.

It contains also a hitherto unpublished list of the Baronets of Nova Scotia, compiled by Robert Milne, of Edinburgh, soon after the Union, and a chapter of Addenda to the Baronetcy, entitled "Chaos," including, among other matters, notes upon all apparently doubtful claims to the title of Baronet which have come to the knowledge of the Editor.

The THIRD EDITION has been considerably enlarged and carefully corrected throughout, and is illustrated by numerous additional woodcuts of Arms and chart pedigrees of the Royal Family.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

IT may fairly be presumed, since Mr. Foster has had free access to the records of the Heralds' College, and the aid of Garter and Bluemantle, that this new Peerage is more accurate than those that have preceded it. . . . Mr. Foster has collected an immense amount of new matter for this work, as may be seen at once on comparing it with other Peerages and Baronetages, and in most instances he gives far fuller genealogies of the later generations of titled families than have previously appeared. An attractive feature in this work, and one that seems likely to commend it to the public, is its engravings, and the armorial designs which accompany each article, and are of more artistic merit than those usually supplied in works of the kind.



BARON WIMBORNE.

The most original feature, and one which will doubtless attract a good deal of attention, is a section styled "Chaos," at the end of the Baronetage, of great novelty and boldness.—This portion of the work will probably disgust those persons whose pretensions it calls in question, though on the other hand it will certainly please genealogists and all those who do not approve of persons bearing honours to which they are not entitled. . . . Mr. Foster is deserving of praise for his courage in scrutinizing the pretensions of self-styled Baronets, and the facts which he has stated may tend to restrain claimants of hereditary honours from assuming their titles before having proved their pedigrees.—Athenæum.

The labour spent by Mr. Foster on this volume must have been immense; for under every title, whether of the Peers or of the Baronets, he gives not only all the male issue, directly or collaterally related to the title, and in remainder to it, but also the children of all the married female members of the aristocracy. This information, it is only fair to add, is not to be found in any other existing "Peerage" or "Baronetage," so that the credit of it belongs wholly to Mr. Foster. We can certify to the great care with which the work is edited, the tastefulness of the heraldic illustrations, and the excellent typography and binding, which go far to increase its practical value as a book of reference.—The Times.

SIR HENRY ALLSOPP.

Mr. Foster has given to the world a Peerage which must rank at once as of the very highest class. Independence of research and of judgment have conducted the compiler to many discoveries which in the aggregate constitute a virtual impeachment of other authorities to an extent amply sufficient to warrant the publication of this volume. In particular, he challenges the validity of a large number of Baronetcies, and, justly considering that titles so circumstanced ought not to be mixed up indifferently with those upon which no doubt hangs, he has collected them in a separate section of his book under the largely expressive title of "Chaos." In many respects "Chaos" is as interesting as it is undoubtedly important. Of this Peerage it may with truth be said that it will compare in point of magnitude and laborious research with some of the very greatest literary undertakings of the day. For all purposes of reference the work will be found to be a comprehensive and accurate record of our titled classes and their blood relations.—Morning Post.

We are glad to notice the publication of a new Peerage and Baronetage, the erudite composer of which—Mr. Joseph Foster—forsaking the too-frequently practised and inveterate fashion of treating uncorroborated statements of private individuals as Gospel truths, has boldly stepped into the arena and has searchingly investigated the true foundation of every claim to dignity. . . . We prefer this work in every respect to the existing compilations of a similar character, and we heartily recommend it as a trustworthy book of reference to the two services.—United Service Gazette.

We strongly recommend Mr. Foster's "Peerage;" it is lucid, reliable, admirably arranged, splendidly printed—a volume which must be placed in all libraries, public as well as private. Moreover it is a herculean literary task, conscientiously and thoroughly well performed.—Whitehall Review.

SIR GABRIEL GOLDNEY.

It might have been thought that books of the Peerage were already sufficiently numerous, but Mr. Joseph Foster shows good cause to the contrary. He has approached his subject from the point of view of the scientific genealogist and student of heraldry—a circumstance which at once places his work in another category from any of the ordinary Peerages.—The Scotsman.

The pedigrees have been considerably amplified, and contain more biographical information than is usually to be found in other Peerages; and this applies not only to the lineal but also to the collateral descents, more especially those of the Baronets. Much of the detail connected therewith is now published for the first time, and has been collected from private sources. Of the various Orders of Knighthood and the shields of the English Sovereigns, both have been well cared for; and the good engraving of the one and the accurate treatment of the other leave nothing more to be desired.—Spectator.

This is quite a notable book—the coats of arms are bravely and handsomely drawn. The work is a laborious and conscientious compilation, a valuable record, and a fine handsome volume.—Vanity Fair.

This is the first issue of a new Peerage, which surpasses all others in the splendour of its get-up, and which joins issue with Lodge, Debrett, and Burke in a way which is likely to excite something more than mere curiosity, for everything which the Editor considers "sham," either title, arms, or pedigree, he unhesitatingly sets down as such. Each page of the work has evidently been made a study. The heraldic illustrations are all new in design, quaint, effective, and well executed, and Mr. Foster has followed a mode of printing the pedigrees by which their perplexing details can be easily understood and traced with less trouble, as it appears to us, than in any existing publications of a similar kind. . . . But the most important part of the work, genealogically, is the Baronetage, which has a special department, named "Chaos." We will merely remark on this head that the Editor is evidently a courageous man, as well as an honest one, and we hope that his labour of five years may be rewarded by all the success it merits. . . . The volume is altogether one of the most attractive we have ever seen, and on account of its many special features is certain to become a popular one.—Dublin Daily Express.

Mr. Foster's method of separating the Peerages which have descended through heiresses or which have been revived in favour of coheirs from the paternal descent of the present holders of them is a great and manifest improvement.—Mr. Foster's is an ampler record of the Knights and their immediate families than is to be met with anywhere else; and he adds a full and useful catalogue of the Companions of all the various Knightly Orders of the Empire.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Both externally and internally this volume is an exceedingly handsome one, and its graphic beauties have been bestowed on it by sympathetic hands. The illustrations which adorn it are not only extremely numerous but they have been designed in a congenial spirit, and executed with taste and a finish that cannot fail of appreciation. The work as a whole is admirably arranged for all purposes of reference, whether by professional men, students, or general readers; alike in its structure, its details, and its introductory notices, it affords clear proof of its author's having obtained a firm grasp of the materials with which he has had to deal. Mr. Foster has produced a Peerage, the very first issue of which takes its place at once in the front rank of books of its own class.—The Morning Advertiser.

Viewing this work as a whole, we have no hesitation in declaring it to be vastly superior to any modern Peerage in existence; and, if carried on in future with the same elaborate care with which it has been originated, is destined at no distant date to supplant in public estimation those older works which lack the authenticity and trustworthiness to be found in its pages.—The National Church.

Mr. Joseph Foster's "Peerage," just published by Messrs. Nichols and Sons, has some distinctive features which will commend it to the classes for which it is designed. The heraldic portions of the work appear to have been the object of especial pains and the genealogies generally seem calculated to sustain the honourable association of the publishers with genealogical works of a trustworthy kind. . . . The coat-armour, revised and corrected by the records of the College of Arms and the Lyon Office, is a special characteristic of the book, which is not a mere instrument for gratifying vulgar curiosity regarding the titled classes, but a work of reference, useful alike to the man of the world, the genealogist, and the student of English history and biography.—The Daily News.

Mr. Foster has produced a work that is vastly more reliable than the less carefully prepared "Peerages" and similar publications that abound. An admirable and striking feature in this great work is the artistic care that is manifested in the illustrations, all of which are original, and must have cost immense labour. The various orders and heraldic devices are portrayed with much artistic spirit, and quite elevate the work out of the ordinary rank of publications of this kind.—The Liverpool Albion.

The quaint and picturesque designs adopted for the arms are a novel and striking feature of the book, and one which will doubtless commend it to the favourable notice of many. . . . The Baronetage is remarkably full and interesting. Mr. Foster has accomplished his enterprise in an admirable manner. Nor can we withhold a meed of praise from the publishers who have produced a book which is in all respects worthy of praise.—The Queen.

It reflects great credit upon the author. . . . The volume, which has been produced in a superior manner, will doubtless take its place amongst the standard works of reference on genealogy.—The Court Journal.

The work is fuller in detail than any other, for not only are all the male descendants of titled houses recorded but the children of the female members as well, and the lineage is given with far more minute and elaborate detail than in contemporary works. . . . . It is elegantly printed, luxuriously bound in blue and gold, lucid in its descriptions, admirably arranged, and beautifully artistic in its heraldic decorations.—Daily Bristol Times and Mirror.

The comprehensiveness of its heraldic and genealogical information is vast, and to the student, and those who are interested, from various causes, in tracing the Royal lineage of England, as well as the pedigrees of ancient families and their remote collateral branches, it offers a wide field for research. The illustrations in the work are made a speciality. They are boldly and clearly drawn, the minutest details of each being well defined.—The Brighton Guardian.

This handsome royal octavo volume, with its wealth of heraldic ornamentation, embodies a most praiseworthy attempt on the part of the compiler to raise the editorial standard of works of reference of this class. Mr. Foster shows himself to be a painstaking genealogist, and his claim to have treated his subject on broader bases, to have consulted unaccustomed, yet trustworthy, sources of information, and to have, in general terms, made it more of a true genealogist's book of reference than Peerages have been heretofore, may be readily allowed. The trickings of arms throughout the book are executed with care and in remarkably good taste, and such of the genealogies as we have tested, at present, have been found full of detail and accurate in the main. Upon the whole, this new candidate for popular favour will, we imagine, prove a most formidable competitor to the old-established Peerages, especially as we learn that Mr. Foster has received valuable assistance and advice from so distinguished a herald as Sir A. W. Woods, Garter. The printing and press-work are faultless, and the heraldic illustrations, as we have already remarked, leave nothing to be desired.—The Derby Mercury.

A handsome volume of ambitious design. Mr. Foster has devoted the last five years to the production of a trustworthy book of reference. . . . The whole work has been prepared with great care and taste, and gives promise of taking its place in the foremost rank of such publications.—The Globe.

The amount of work expended in the collection of the details contained in this book is something appalling to the ordinary mind. These facts require study before they can be estimated or criticised, but there is one feature of the book which will be apparent to the most casual turner-over of the leaves. We all know the trim arms usual in Peerages, where all the coats are at first sight as much alike as two peas. But here all is different. The supporters look as if they were supporting something, and many of the shields would evidently fall into space without their assistance. All is life and action, so that these woodcuts, which are all drawn from authentic sources, give a liveliness to the volume which it would not otherwise possess.—Temple Bar.

Mr. Foster, as the result of most arduous labours, has succeeded in compiling a work containing in all its several parts a vast amount of useful and much novel information, and has done this in a manner that deserves high praise.—Land and Water.

Mr. Joseph Foster, than whom no man is better qualified for the task, has, in the sumptuous, the regal volume before us, produced, assuredly, the finest, the most masterly, the most carefully arranged and best thought-out Peerage and Baronetage of the age. Those who know (and what genealogist does not?) his important volumes of county pedigrees, which have been favourably noticed in these pages, must have been struck with the admirable manner in which they were prepared, and have felt how thoroughly competent the compiler was for the task. The present work, gigantic in its proportions, is a fitting continuation of his labours, and will remain a lasting monument to his judgment and skill.

Mr. Foster, in his work, gives, in each case, not only the usual notices of the present Peer or Baronet, and of his family, but brief and well-condensed lineages, from the earliest available periods downwards; and these add immeasurably to the value and usefulness of his work; one useful, and to us highly important, feature, being the introduction, at an enormous addition of labour, of the issue in many instances of female members of the various noble families. This is but seldom given in works of this kind, but is an essential to their usefulness as books of reference, and cannot be too highly commended. Considerable pains appears to have been taken to weed out "doubtfuls" among the baronets, and these, with many spurious claims, are thrown by Mr. Foster into "chaos," from which, we opine, it will be almost a hopeless task even for the Heralds' College itself to extricate them. His avowed object has been "to produce a useful and trustworthy book of reference, such a book as will supply, in a condensed form, the genealogical as well as biographical history of the principal personages of the present day, including the near blood relations of every Peer and Baronet;" and to this end he has certainly, and with admirable results, "worked up, to an infinitely greater extent than has hitherto been attempted, the very numerous, and for the most part uncollected, accounts of collateral descents" especially relating to the Baronets; and thus a vastly augmented value is given to his work over others.

We are not, after a careful examination of Mr. Foster's volume, going to affirm that it is faultless, for it would be utterly impossible to produce a work of its kind that should in every case be free from error; but this we will say, that it seems to us to be far more accurate even in the smallest details than others, and bears evidence of scrupulous care in the verifying of dates, and in other particulars. The engravings, several hundred in number, are deserving of all praise. Drawn in the true spirit of the early heralds, and executed with strict fidelity to heraldic details, they form a feature of Mr. Foster's work that is eminently attractive, and give it a tone of originality and of pure artistic feeling that is quite refreshing.—The Reliquary.
